```
public static int ClimbStairs(int n)
                                                public static int ClimbStairs(int n)
if (n == 1)
                                                    // Base cases
                                                    if (n == 1) return 1;
    return 1;
                                                    if (n == 2) return 2; // Initialize variables to store the number
if (n == 2)
                                                of ways to climb
                                                    int prev = 1;
   return 2;
                                                    int curr = 2;
                                                    // Calculate the number of ways to climb for
                                                n > 2
int[] dp = new int[n + 1];
dp[1] = 1;
                                                    for (int i = 3; i \le n; i++)
dp[2] = 2;
                                                        int temp = curr;
for (int i = 3; i \le n; i++)
                                                        curr = prev + curr;
                                                        prev = temp;
    dp[i] = dp[i - 1] + dp[i - 2];
                                                    return curr;
return dp[n];
```