

The X-axis represents the number of negative samples for a given item, while the Y-axis represents the retention rate (1 - forgetting rate) for the original 300 items.

(b) The final performance is collected with cold-start items and warm-start items. The x-axis represents the prediction value, and traffic. The Y-axis corresponds to the click rate in the intial state.